DENTISTRY.
A good blacksmith would make a poor dentist, and a man may be a very good dentist in certain kinds of work and poor in others. It is not possible for him to be equally expert in all branches of his art; for there is as much difference between operative and mechanical dentistry as there is between shoeing a horse and shoeing a man.

THE UNION FLAG SOUTH IN 1861.
To the editor of the New York Sun:
In the National Museum at Washington is a flag that bears an inscription to the effect that it was the first United States flag displayed in a seceded State by one of its citizens who was loyal to the Union. This flag comes from Louisiana, and bears the date June, 1862.

This honor rightly belongs to Mr. Andrew Jamieson, who was then, and is still, a resident of Alexandria, Va. It will be remembered that Ellsworth was killed May 24, 1861, at the Marshall House in Alexandria, and it was three days after this event that Mr. Jamieson hung out a large Union flag from the window of his residence. Mr. Jamieson procured this flag, after a long search, from a German who kept a restaurant in Alexandria.

Mr. Jamieson was the only member of a large family who remained steadfastly loyal to the Union cause. His flag was repeatedly cheered by the northern troops as they passed through the streets of Alexandria, and this incident naturally brought out strong expressions of disapproval from his secessionist neighbors.

Mr. Edmund C. Stedman, in a recent letter to the writer, bears testimony to Mr. Jamieson's courage and loyalty in that troublous time. In a letter to the New York World, dated May 31, 1861, Mr. Stedman, who was then a war correspondent of the World, says: "Today I sat down with him (Dr. Rosenkrantz, another loyal citizen of Alexandria) at the residence of the British Consul, Mr. Jamieson, who was the first to hang out a Union flag in Alexandria."

Mr. Stedman further says in this letter of May 31, 1861: "All the ladies of Alexandria sympathize with the Virginia side, and are exceedingly loquacious about the invasion of the Old Dominion, and unnecessarily afraid of the zouaves, who now protect their firesides." It is a curious fact that one of these zouaves, who had recently been discharged from the army, shot Mr. Jamieson's mother in the arm while she and her son were walking together along the street. The zouave had sworn that he would shoot a rebel before he left Alexandria, and while drunk, had come near killing the mother of one of the few loyal Union men in the town.

She Locked the Bridegroom Out.
Guests at the Kennedy House were in good humor all of yesterday over an occurrence which had transpired the night before. Wednesday there arrived a bridal couple who had come direct to Chattanooga immediately following the ceremony. Bride and groom gave evidence of refinement and later developments proved their good breeding and modesty was most marked. The gentleman is a prosperous merchant in the land of flowers and his bride one of the brightest and most winsome buds in that garden of female loveliness.

The couple reached the hotel late in the evening, and were immediately ushered into the bridal room of the hotel. Shortly following the disposition of the baggage the groom reappeared in the office of the hotel, where only the night clerk remained. That courteous official, noting the nervousness of the stranger, made bold to inquire if he could provide further toward his comfort. The young man's blush was akin to scarlet when he thanked the clerk and confessed he merely sought the office while his wife retired, and would himself retire a little later. Some time elapsed, when the clerk suggested that the stranger appeared sleepy and possibly the bride was exercised over his long absence.

Again the clerk's kindly pointed his face a bright red as he arose and said he believed he would "turn in." In five minutes he was again back in the office.

"Mr. Clerk," he said, "I must ask your advice. The modesty of both my wife and myself is developed to an extraordinary extent. While she was making her toilet for the night I withdrew. It seems she feared intrusion, and to guard against it locked the door. She has evidently fallen asleep, for I cannot awaken her. What shall I do?" The clerk, who is man advanced in years, is of blunt architecture, and readily responded: "Possibly your knock was of the timid character. Try it again, and with more demonstration."

The groom acted under instructions, but either the deep sleep of the bride or her extraordinary modesty denied the husband admittance. The clerk retired from the hallway to conceal his mirth, and the groom, thinking he was not detected, lost heart and quietly tiptoed down the hall, took a seat upon the back stair landing, and remained there throughout the entire night.

The next morning he made his toilet in the wash room, joined the bride at the breakfast table, and, when hunger had been appeased, settled his bill, and the couple took the first train for out of town.—Chattanooga Daily Times.

38 YEARS
Capt. A. P. Pond, of Hampton, Va., sailed the seas, and for five years was superintendent of the U. S. seal fisheries in Alaska. He says: "I was extremely nervous; had a severe pain in the region of my heart. Could not sleep. Was treated by eminent physicians without benefit. Finally I used Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Restorative. These remedies are sold by all druggists on a trial basis, or sent by Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., a bottle, 6 bottles $5 express prepaid. Alexandria, Va."
